ANSWER TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS;
MEMORANDUM OF POINTS
AND AUTHORITIES

Judge: The Honorable
James Ware

20 INTRODUCTION

21 Pablo J. Agrio is a California state inmate at the Correctional Training Facility, proceeding 22 pro se in this habeas corpus action. Agrio alleges that the Board of Parole Hearings 23 unconstitutionally denied him parole at his 2005 parole consideration hearing. Because Agrio 24 fails to prove that the state court decisions denying him relief are contrary to, or an unreasonable 25 application of, clearly established federal law, or that the decisions involved an unreasonable 26 determination of the facts, his disagreement with the Board's parole denial does not entitle him to 27 a federal writ of habeas corpus and his petition should be denied.

28 On October 24, 2007, this Court issued an order to show cause liberally construing Agrio's

1 petition as stating a cognizable claim for a due process violation based on the sufficiency of the 2 evidence. Respondent Ben Curry, Warden, answers as follows:

3 ANSWER TO THE ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

4 In response to the petition for writ of habeas corpus filed on August 16, 2007, Respondent 5 hereby admits, denies, and alleges the following:

6 1. Agrio is in the lawful custody of the California Department of Corrections and 7 Rehabilitation after being convicted of second degree murder with a firearm use enhancement.
8 (Ex. A, Abstract of Judgment.) He is currently serving an indeterminate sentence of seventeen 9 years to life. (Id.) Agrio does not appear to challenge his underlying conviction in the current 10 proceeding.

11 2. Agrio, who was originally from Panama, and his wife, Alma, had been married for less 12 than one year and had a one-year-old son. (Ex. B, Decision, Court of Appeal of the State of 13 California, Fourth Appellate District, No. D010237 at 2.) Agrio, an ex-marine, worked as a San 14 Diego police officer and Alma was graduating from the San Diego Sheriff's Academy. (Id. at 2-15 3.) The couple had interpersonal problems and fights, which led to periods of separation before 16 and during their marriage. (Id. at 3.)

17 3. On March 26, 1988, Alma came home with Tami Hahn, a classmate. (Ex. B at 4.)
18 After briefly being home, Alma left with Hahn to attend a graduation party. (Ibid.) Agrio was 19 angry that Alma attended the party without his specific consent and made comments to Nelly
20 Cordova, the couple's babysitter, that "[Alma] wants to do like the fucking American whores."
21 (Ibid.) When Alma did not return home as he expected, Agrio insisted on taking Cordova home 22 and was becoming increasingly angry with Alma. (Ibid.) Agrio told Cordova that "What Alma 23 just did is going to cost her; [it] is going to cost her a lot." (Ibid.)

24 4. Around 10 p.m., Hahn and Alma left the graduation party. (Ex. B at 5.) Hahn dropped 25 Alma off at her house because she was drunk. (Ibid.) Because Hahn was worried about her, she 26 later called Alma's home. (Ibid.) Agrio answer the phone, sounding irritated, and told Hahn that 27 he was "not finished with her." (Ibid.)

28 5. When Alma returned home, she refused to respond to Agrio's angry demands for 1 explanations about her conduct. (Ex. B at 5.) Alma went into the bedroom and locked the door, 2 but Agrio broke it down and ripped the phone from the wall when Alma attempted to call for 3 help. (Ibid.) Agrio began tearing up Alma's graduation invitations and struck her. (Id. at 5-6.)

4 6. Agrio claims that Alma then took a loaded gun and pointed it at him. (Ex. B at 5-6.)
5 Wrestling the gun away from her by forcing her to the floor, Agrio shook Alma by the shoulders
6 and fired a single shot into the back of her head, killing her. (Id. at 6.)

7 7. Agrio called 911. (Ex. B at 6.) When the police arrived, Agrio told police that he 8 loved his wife, but also complained that she was a young girl who wanted to party instead of 9 staying home and serving as a wife and mother. (Ibid.)

10 8. Respondent admits that on December 6, 2005, the Board found Agrio unsuitable for 11 parole. (Ex. C, Subsequent Parole Consideration Hearing at 98-106.) The Board concluded that 12 the offense was particularly cruel and callous with absolutely no motive, and carried out in a 13 dispassionate manner. (Ex. C at 98.) Specifically, the Board found that Alma's murder was 14 more than an unintentional or accidental death given Agrio's history as a police officer and 15 Marine, and that she was shot to death over an incident that never should have escalated into 16 murder. (Id. at 13-22, 98-99.) Moreover, the Board found that Agrio was failing to take 17 responsibility for his crime and was faulting Alma — the victim — for his actions. (Id. at 13-22, 18 99-101.) The Board also noted that Agrio was deceiving his current wife by not telling her about 19 his parole plans to live with another woman if he was paroled to San Diego (rather than San Luis 20 Obispo where his wife resides); that he made false statements to the evaluating psychologist; and 21 that he abruptly left his parole consideration hearing after the Board indicated that it was denying 22 him parole and before the panel had finished articulating the reasons for their decision. (Id. at 23 26-30, 51-54, 61-70, 74-79, 100-101, 103, 105.)

24 9. Respondent admits that the San Diego County Superior Court provided a six-page 25 reasoned decision denying Agrio's petition for writ of habeas corpus on April 11, 2006. (Ex. D, 26
27
28

1 Superior Court Pet. & Denial.)<sup>1/</sup> Initially, the court noted that Agrio had failed to provide a 2 complete copy of his parole consideration hearing transcript and had only attached select pages of 3 the transcript to his petition. (Id. at 2-3.) Although the court advised that it could deny the 4 petition because Agrio had not provided a complete transcript, it nonetheless concluded that the 5 hearing transcript pages provided by Agrio were sufficient to deny the petition because some 6 evidence supported the Board's decision denying him parole. (Id. at 3.) Specifically, the court 7 concluded that there was some evidence supporting the Board's decision that Agrio was a current 8 danger to society (and thus not suitable for parole) because Agrio was minimizing his role in the 9 crime; failing to take responsibility for his actions; attempting to place some of the blame on the 10 victim; failing to be completely honest with his current wife regarding his plans to live with 11 another woman if he were required to parole to San Diego County; and withholding information 12 from the evaluating psychiatrist. (Id. at 3-4.) Finally, the court also noted that the Board's 13 decision was strengthened by Agrio's decision to leave the hearing before the Board was finished 14 articulating its reasons for denying him parole. (Id. at 4.)

15 10. Respondent admits that the California Court of Appeal denied Agrio's petition for writ 16 of habeas corpus on October 6, 2006 in a four-page reasoned decision. (Ex. E, Appellate Court 17 Pet. & Denial.) After noting that the Board is required to consider all relevant and reliable 18 information, including the commitment offense, in determining whether an inmate's release 19 poses an unreasonable risk of safety to society, the court found that there was some evidence 20 supporting the Board's decision to deny parole based on the facts of the commitment offense, 21 Agrio's deception regarding his parole plans, and his false statements to the evaluating 22 psychologist. (Ex. E at p. 4.) The court also noted that Agrio abruptly left the hearing after 23 learning that he would not be granted parole because, as stated by the Board, he "didn't want to 24 hear the truth here and didn't want to face the facts . . . ." (Ibid.) Finally, the court advised that 25 Agrio's preemptory challenges to the appellate court justices were improper and that his reliance 26

27
 28 1. To avoid repetition and unnecessary volume, the exhibits attached to Agrio's state court petitions have been removed. Respondent will provide these documents upon the Court's request.

1 on In re Shaputis, (August 21, 2007, No. D049895) __Cal.Rptr.3d __, 2007 WL 2372405, was 2 misplaced because the California Supreme Court had, in granting review, ordered the case
 3 depublished, thus prohibiting any court or party from citing or relying on it. (Id. at 3-4.)

4 11. Respondent admits that the California Supreme Court denied Agrio's petition for 5 review on July 25, 2007. (Ex. F, Supreme Court Pet. & Denial.)

6 12. Respondent admits that Agrio has exhausted his state court remedies regarding his 7 allegations that there is no evidence supporting his parole denial; that he is entitled to a similar 8 result as in In re Shaputis, supra, __Cal.Rptr.3d __, 2007 WL 2372405; and that the Board 9 improperly relied on his commitment offense in finding him unsuitable for parole. (See 10 generally, Petn.)<sup>2/</sup> However, Respondent denies that Agrio has exhausted his claims to the extent 11 that they are more broadly interpreted to encompass any systematic issues beyond this particular 12 review of parole denial.

13 13. Respondent denies that the state courts' denial of habeas corpus relief was contrary to, 14 or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established United States Supreme Court law, 15 or that the denial was based on an unreasonable interpretation of facts in light of the evidence 16 presented. Agrio therefore fails to make a case for relief under the Anti-Terrorism and Effective 17 Death Penalty Act of 1996 (AEDPA). 28 U.S.C. § 2254.

18 14. Respondent denies that Agrio has a federally protected liberty interest in parole; thus, 19 Agrio fails to assert a basis for federal jurisdiction. See Greenholtz v. Inmates of Neb. Penal & 20 Corr. Complex, 442 U.S. 1, 12 (1979) (liberty interest in conditional parole release date created 21 by unique structure and language of state parole statute); In re Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th 1061, 22 1087 (2005) (California's parole scheme is a two-step process that does not impose a mandatory 23 duty to grant life inmates parole before a suitability finding); Sandin v. Connor, 515 U.S. 472, 24 484 (1995) (no federal liberty interest in parole because serving a contemplated sentence does not

 26 2. Agrio alleged additional claims in his state superior court petition, but failed to exhaust 27 his state court remedies by asserting these claims through the California Supreme Court or alleging 28 them in his federal petition. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(1)(A); see O'Sullivan v. Boerckel, 526 U.S. 838, 844 (1999) (a state inmate must properly exhaust available state court remedies before a federal court may consider granting habeas corpus relief). Accordingly, Respondent will not address them.

1 create an atypical or significant hardship compared with ordinary prison life); contra Sass v. Cal.
2 Bd. of Prison Terms, 461 F.3d 1123, 1128 (9th Cir. 2006) (holding that California inmates have a 3 federally protected liberty interest in a parole).

4 15. If Agrio has a federally protected liberty interest in parole, Respondent affirmatively
5 alleges that Agrio had an opportunity to present his case to the Board, and that the Board
6 provided him with a detailed explanation as to why he was denied parole. (Ex. C.) Thus, Agrio 7 received all process due under Greenholtz v. Inmates of the Nebraska Penal and Correctional 8 Complex, 442 U.S. 1 (1979), the only clearly established United States Supreme Court law 9 regarding the due process rights of inmates at parole consideration hearings.

10 16. Respondent denies that this Court must review Agrio's parole denial under the some-11 evidence standard. In Carey v. Musladin, __ U.S. __, 127 S. Ct. 649, 654 (2006), the United 12 States Supreme Court emphasized that under AEDPA, only Supreme Court holdings regarding 13 the specific issue presented may be used to overturn valid state court decisions. As no clearly 14 established federal law provides that a parole denial must be supported by some evidence, this 15 Court need not review the current matter under the some-evidence standard.

16 17. Respondent affirmatively alleges that if the some-evidence standard does apply to 17 federal review of parole denials, the proper standard is that found in Superintendent v. Hill, 472
18 U.S. 445, 455 (1985), which requires that only a "modicum of evidence" support the Board's 19 decision to deny parole. Respondent affirmatively alleges that under this standard, some 20 evidence supports the Board's parole denial.

21 18. Respondent denies that this Court must make an independent determination of whether 22 Agrio currently poses an unreasonable risk of danger to society in order to uphold the state court 23 decisions denying parole.

24 19. Respondent affirmatively alleges that the state courts properly used the some-evidence 25 standard to evaluate the Board's decision. Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th at 1071. Respondent 26 affirmatively alleges that the correct application of the some-evidence test is whether some 27 evidence in the record supports the factual basis for the Board's parole denial. Thus, Respondent 28 denies that California state courts are required to make an independent determination of whether

1 Agrio currently poses an unreasonable risk of danger to society.

2 20. Respondent affirmatively alleges that the Board considered all relevant and reliable 3 evidence before it and, after properly applying California's parole suitability criteria, made an 4 individualized determination to deny Agrio parole. (Ex. E.)

5 23. Respondent affirmatively alleges that the Board properly considered the gravity of 6 Agrio's commitment offense, as required under California Penal Code section 3041(b). (See also 7 Exs. D-E.) Moreover, the California Supreme Court held in Dannenberg that the Board may rely 8 solely on the circumstances of the commitment offense in denying parole. 34 Cal.4th at 1094.
9 Respondent denies that the Board's reliance in part on the commitment offense to deny Agrio 10 parole violates his due process rights. Sass, 461 F.3d at 1129; Irons v. Carey, 505 F.3d 846 (9th 11 Cir. 2007).

12 24. Respondent denies that the Board must conduct a proportionality review regarding the 13 length of an inmate's incarceration or conduct an inter-case comparative review between the 14 inmate's offense and similar offenses committed by other inmates when determining whether an 15 inmate is suitable for parole. Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at 1098. Specifically, Respondent 16 denies that Agrio's case should be compared to, or that he is entitled to a similar result, as in In 17 re Shaputis, supra, __ Cal.Rptr.3d __, 2007 WL 2372405. Moreover, Respondent alleges that the 18 California Supreme Court granted review in Shaputis and that it may no longer be cited or relied 19 on by any court or party. Cal. Rule of Court, Rule 8.1105, subd. (e), Rule 8.1115, subd. (a).

20 25. Respondent denies that Agrio is entitled to immediate relief.

21 26. Respondent denies that the Board's decision denying parole violated Agrio's due 22 process rights.

23 27. If the petition is granted, Agrio's remedy is limited to a new parole consideration 24 hearing before the Board that comports with due process. Benny v. U.S. Parole Comm'n, 295
25 F.3d 977, 984-985 (9th Cir. 2002); In re Rosenkrantz, 29 Cal.4th 616, 658 (2002).

26 28. Respondent admits that Agrio's claim is timely under 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1), and that 27 the petition is not barred by the non-retroactivity doctrine.

28 29. Respondent denies that an evidentiary hearing is necessary in this matter.

30. Respondent affirmatively alleges that Agrio fails to state or establish any grounds for habeas corpus relief.

31. Except as expressly admitted above, Respondent denies, generally and specifically, each and every allegation of the petition, and specifically denies that Agrio's administrative, statutory, or constitutional rights have been violated in any way.

Accordingly, Respondent respectfully requests that the petition for writ of habeas corpus be denied.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT

I.

THE STATE COURT'S DENIAL OF AGRIO'S HABEAS CLAIM WAS NOT CONTRARY TO OR AN UNREASONABLE APPLICATION OF CLEARLY ESTABLISHED FEDERAL LAW, NOR WAS IT BASED ON AN UNREASONABLE DETERMINATION OF THE FACTS.

Under AEDPA, a federal court may only grant a writ of habeas corpus if the state court's adjudication of a claim on the merits was either: (1) "contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States;" or (2) "based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented at the State Court proceeding." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1-2).

A state court decision is contrary to clearly established federal law if "the state court applies a rule that contradicts the governing law set forth in [United States Supreme Court] cases," or "the state court confronts a set of facts that are materially indistinguishable from a decision of [the United States Supreme] Court and nevertheless arrives at a result different from [the Court's] precedent." Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 73 (2003) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). A state court decision is an unreasonable application of clearly established law "if the state court identifies the correct governing legal principle from [the United States Supreme Court's] decision but unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the prisoner's case." Id. at 75. It is not enough that the state court applied the law erroneously or incorrectly; rather, the court must have made an objectively unreasonable application. Id. at 75-

2 Here, the state court decision denying Agrio's claim for habeas relief is neither contrary to 3 or an unreasonable application of federal law, nor was it based on an unreasonable determination 4 of the facts in light of the evidence presented. First, Agrio received all process required under 5 Greenholtz, the only clearly established federal law specifically addressing an inmate's due 6 process rights in a parole consideration hearing. Second, the state court decision did not involve 7 an unreasonable interpretation of the evidence; rather, some evidence supports the state court
 8 holding denying Agrio parole. Thus, Agrio fails to establish an AEDPA violation, and the state 9 court decision denying habeas relief must stand.

10 A. The State Court Decision Was Not Contrary to Clearly Established Federal 11 Law.

12 Agrio is not entitled to federal habeas relief because he received all process due under 13 Greenholtz – the only United States Supreme Court decision establishing due process protections 14 for parole determinations. In Greenholtz, the Court held that the only process required at a 15 parole consideration hearing is an opportunity for the inmate to present his case, and if parole is 16 denied, an explanation for the denial. Greenholtz, 442 U.S. at 16.

17 Agrio received both of these protections during his 2005 parole consideration hearing. First, 18 Agrio had a chance to fully present his case to the Board. Agrio discussed his commitment 19 offense, including his responsibility for, and remorse about, Alma's murder; his social history; 20 relationships with family and friends; his parole plans should he be released; his psychological 21 evaluations; and his programming while incarcerated. (Ex. C at 12-97.)

22 Second, when the Board returned after deliberation, it provided Agrio with a full 23 explanation as to why he was denied parole. (Ex. C at 98-106.)

24 Thus, Agrio's due process rights were satisfied: he received both an opportunity to present 25 his case before the Board and a reasoned explanation as to why the Board denied him parole.
 26 Accordingly, he is not entitled to relief and the petition must be denied.

B. The Some-Evidence Standard of Review Is Not Clearly Established Federal Law By the United States Supreme Court for Challenging Parole Denials.

The some-evidence standard does not apply in federal habeas proceedings challenging parole denials because it is not clearly established federal law. The United States Supreme Court has reiterated that for AEDPA purposes, “clearly established federal law” refers only to the holdings of the nation’s highest court on the specific issue presented. Carey v. Musladin, supra, ___ U.S. ___, 127 S. Ct. at 653. In Musladin, a convicted murderer filed a federal habeas petition after a state appellate court upheld the victim’s family members’ wearing of buttons with the victim’s photograph during the trial, concluding that it was not inherently or actually prejudicial based on two United State Supreme Court cases. Id. at 651-52. The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit reversed, finding that the state court’s decision was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law – the prejudice test in the two United State Supreme Court cases. Id. at 652. In vacating the Ninth Circuit’s decision, the Supreme Court stated that the cases relied on by the Ninth Circuit involved state-sponsored courtroom practices – making a defendant wear prison clothing during trial and seating four uniformed troopers behind a defendant during trial – that were unlike the private action of the victim’s family members’ wearing of buttons. Id. at 653-54. The Musladin Court further noted that the two cases were not clearly established federal law on the issue because the United States Supreme Court “has never addressed a claim that such private-actor courtroom conduct was so inherently prejudicial that it deprived a defendant of a fair trial.” Id. at 653. Consequently, the Court held that the Ninth Circuit erred by importing a federal test for prejudicial state action in a courtroom to private spectators’ courtroom conduct. Id. at 654.

Again, in Schriro v. Landrigan, ___ U.S. ___, 127 S. Ct. 1933, 1942 (2007), the United States Supreme Court factually distinguished two of its cases that the Ninth Circuit cited in holding that the state court unreasonably applied clearly established federal law when finding ineffective assistance of counsel claims frivolous. In Landrigan, a criminal defendant questioned by the judge told the court that he did not want mitigating evidence presented (his attorney advised otherwise). Id. at 1937-38. The United States Supreme Court reasoned that the two cases relied 1 on by the Ninth Circuit were not clearly established federal law by factually distinguishing them.

 2 See id. at 1942. The Court noted that one case involved an attorney's failure to provide 3 mitigating evidence and the other case concerned a defendant who refused to help develop 4 mitigating evidence. Id. See also Wright v. Van Patten __ S.Ct. __, 2008 WL 59980, *3-4 5 (2008) (United States Supreme Court reversed the Seventh Circuit and upheld a state appellate 6 court determination that the defendant's right to counsel was not violated when defense counsel 7 appeared by speaker phone at a hearing because Supreme Court precedents did not clearly hold 8 that counsel's participation by speaker phone amounted to complete denial of counsel, the 9 equivalent to total absence. Accordingly, the Court concluded that the state appellate court's 10 determination was not contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal 11 law, as required to grant federal habeas relief).

12 Likewise, several recent Ninth Circuit decisions also emphasize that there can be no clearly 13 established federal law where the Supreme Court has never addressed a particular issue or 14 applied a certain test to a specific type of proceeding. For instance, in Foote v. Del Papa, 492
 15 F.3d 1026 (9th Cir. 2007) the Ninth Circuit affirmed the district court's denial of a petition 16 alleging ineffective assistance of appellate counsel based on an alleged conflict of interest 17 because no Supreme Court case has held that such an irreconcilable conflict violates the Sixth 18 Amendment. Id. at *3-4. Similarly, in Nguyen v. Garcia, 477 F.3d 716 (9th Cir. 2007), the 19 Ninth Circuit upheld the state court's decision – finding that Wainwright v. Greenfield, 474 U.S.
 20 284 (1986) did not apply to a state court competency hearing – because the Supreme Court has 21 not held that Wainwright applied to competency hearings and thus, was not contrary to clearly 22 established federal law. Id. at 718, 727. Finally, in Locke v. Cattell, 476 F.3d 46 (9th Cir. 2007), 23 the Ninth Circuit affirmed the denial of a federal habeas petition based on a proposed violation of 24 Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966) concluding that, because no Supreme Court case 25 supported petitioner's claim that his admission to a crime transformed a police interview into a 26 custodial interrogation, the state court's decision denying relief was not unreasonable under 27 AEDPA. Cattell, 476 F.3d at 53.

28 Accordingly, because Superintendent v. Hill, supra, 472 U.S. at 455-56 applied the some-

1 evidence standard to a prison disciplinary hearing and Agrio challenges his 2005 parole 2 consideration hearing, the some-evidence standard does not apply. Because Greenholtz is the 3 only United States Supreme Court authority describing the process due at a parole consideration 4 hearing when an inmate has a federal liberty interest in parole, the Greenholtz test, not the some-5 evidence standard, should apply in this proceeding. Regardless, Respondent recognizes that the 6 Ninth Circuit has held otherwise, most recently in Irons v. Carey, supra, 505 F.3d 846, and will 7 argue this case accordingly.

8 C. The State Court Decision Upholding the Board's Parole Denial Was a 9 Reasonable Application of Clearly Established Federal Law.

10 Assuming Agrio has a federally protected liberty interest in parole, and if the "minimally 11 stringent" some-evidence standard is applicable, then the requirements of due process are 12 satisfied if there is "any evidence in the record that could support the conclusion reached by the 13 board." See Hill, 472 U.S. at 455-56 (applying some-evidence standard to prison disciplinary 14 hearing). The some-evidence standard "does not require examination of the entire record, 15 independent assessment of the credibility of witnesses, or weighing of the evidence;" rather, it 16 assures that "the record is not so devoid of evidence that the findings of the . . . board were 17 without support or otherwise arbitrary." Id. at 457. Thus, both the "reasonable determination" 18 standard of AEDPA and the some-evidence standard of Hill are very minimal standards.

19 Although Agrio invites the Court to re-examine the facts of his case and re-weigh the 20 evidence presented to the Board, AEDPA does not permit this degree of judicial intrusion. Agrio 21 bears the burden of proving that the state court's factual determinations were objectively 22 unreasonable. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1); Juan H. v. Allen, 408 F.3d 1262, 1270 (9th Cir. 2005).
 23 So long as the state court's reasoned decision was a reasonable determination of the facts 24 presented, Agrio's claim must fail.

25 Moreover, in assessing the state court's review of Agrio's claims, not only should the 26 appropriate deference be afforded under AEDPA to the state court's review, but deference is also 27 due to the underlying Board decision. The Supreme Court has recognized the difficult and 28 sensitive task faced by the Board members in evaluating the advisability of parole release.

1 Greenholtz, 442 U.S. at 9-10. Thus, contrary to Agrio's belief that he should be paroled based on 2 the evidence in support of parole presented at the hearing (see generally, Petn.), the Supreme 3 Court has stated that in parole release, there is no set of facts which, if shown, mandate a 4 decision favorable to the inmate. Id. Instead, under the some-evidence standard, the court's 5 inquiry is limited solely to determining whether the state court properly found that the Board's 6 decision to deny parole is supported by some evidence in the record, i.e., any evidence. Hill, 472 7 U.S. at 455.

8 When, as here, the California Supreme Court denies a petition for review without 9 comment, the federal court will look to the last reasoned decision as the basis for the state court's 10 judgment. Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797, 803-04 (1991). In this case, the last reasoned 11 decision is the Fourth Appellate District's October 6, 2006 decision denying Agrio's habeas 12 claim. (Ex. E.) There, the court concluded that there was some evidence supporting the Board's 13 decision to deny parole based on the facts of the commitment offense, Agrio's deception
 14 regarding his parole plans, and his false statements to the evaluating psychologist. (Id. at p. 4.) 15 The court also noted that Agrio abruptly left the hearing after learning that he would not be 16 granted parole because, as stated by the Board, he "didn't want to hear the truth here and didn't 17 want to face the facts . . . ." (Ibid.) Thus, the court determined that the Board considered all 18 relevant and reliable information in an individualized manner and some evidence supported the 19 Board's decision denying Agrio parole. (Id. at 4.) These findings were a reasonable application 20 of the Hill some-evidence test and thus, Agrio's claim must fail.

21 Agrio argues that due process precludes the Board from relying on the circumstances of 22 the commitment offense to deny parole. This argument fails for a number of reasons. First,
 23 reliance on the commitment offense is not contrary to any clearly established United States
 24 Supreme Court law and thus cannot be the basis for relief under AEDPA. Andrade, 538 U.S. at 25 73.

26 Second, federal case law does not compel a different result. For example, in Biggs v.
 27 Terhune, 334 F.3d 910 (9th Cir. 2003), the Ninth Circuit stated that the Board's continuing 28 reliance on an unchanging factor to deny parole "could result in a due process violation." Id. at

1 917. However, the Biggs court did not definitively indicate that reliance on an unchanging factor 2 necessarily violates due process, only that it possibly could. Indeed, the court praised Biggs for 3 being “a model inmate,” and found that the record was “replete with the gains Biggs has made,”
 4 including a master’s degree in business administration. Id. at 912. Nonetheless, the court denied 5 habeas relief because the Board’s decision to deny parole—which relied solely on the 6 commitment offense—was supported by some evidence. Most importantly, the statement in 7 Biggs is merely circuit court dicta, and not clearly established federal law sufficient to overturn a 8 state court decision under AEDPA standards. Crater v. Galaza, 491 F.3d 1119, 1126, fn. 8 9 (2007) (circuit court decisions are not controlling under AEDPA).

10 Furthermore, the Ninth Circuit has emphasized that Biggs does not contain mandatory 11 language, and that “[u]nder AEDPA, it is not our function to speculate about how future parole 12 hearings could proceed.” Sass, 461 F.3d at 1129. The Sass court rejected the argument that the 13 Board’s reliance on “immutable behavioral evidence” to deny parole violated federal due 14 process.<sup>3/</sup> Id.; Irons, 505 F.3d at 851, 853 (in dicta, the Ninth Circuit held that despite 15 “substantial” evidence of rehabilitation, the Board acted properly within its discretion in 16 continuing to rely on the inmate’s offense to deny parole.) Although the Ninth Circuit recently 17 held in Hayward v. Marshall (9th Cir. 2007) __ F.3d __, 2008 WL 43716, that the Governor’s 18 continued reliance on Hayward’s commitment offense violated due process, the court expressly 19 limited its holding to the facts of Hayward’s case and the nature of his specific conviction 20 offense. (Hayward, at p. *8, fn. 10.) Moreover, when conducting an AEDPA analysis, “[w]hat 21 matters are the holdings of the [United States] Supreme Court, not the holdings of lower federal 22 courts.” Plumlee v. Masto (9th Cir. 2008) __ F.3d __ 2008 WL 151273 at *5-6. Thus, because 23 reliance on the commitment offense is not contrary to any clearly established United States 24

25 3. This Court has also recognized that the Board may properly rely on static factors to deny 26 parole. In a recent decision, this Court noted that “[p]ast criminal conduct is not some arbitrary 27 factor like eye color that has nothing to do with present dangerousness. Recidivism concerns are 28 genuine. California’s parole scheme does not offend due process by allowing the [Board] to predict that an inmate presents a present danger based on a crime he committed many years ago.” Hill v.
Kane, 2006 WL 3020923 at *3 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 26, 2006) (citations omitted).

1 Supreme Court law, circuit authority is insufficient to reverse a state court decision under 2 AEDPA.

3 Finally, California law allows the Board to rely on the commitment offense in denying 4 parole: California Penal Code section 3401(b) requires that the Board examine the commitment 5 offense; and the California Supreme Court held in Dannenberg that the Board may solely rely on 6 the circumstances of the commitment offense to deny parole. Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th at 1094.

7 Thus, although the Board relied on other factors in addition to Agrio's commitment 8 offense, the Board is not precluded from considering and relying on the circumstances of the 9 commitment offense to deny him parole. Because Agrio's has failed to prove that the state court 10 decisions were contrary to AEDPA standards, his claim must be denied.

11 D. The State Court Decision Upholding the Board's Parole Denial Was a 12 Reasonable Interpretation of the Facts in Light of the Evidence Presented.

13 The second standard under AEDPA is that a state court habeas decision must be based on 14 a reasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented. 28 U.S.C. § 15 2254(d)(2). AEDPA defers to state courts, indicating that "a determination of a factual issue 16 made by a State court shall be presumed to be correct." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1). Additionally, 17 the Petitioner bears the burden of proof on this prong, and he must show that the state court's 18 factual determinations were objectively unreasonable. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1); Juan H. v. Allen, 19 408 F.3d 1262, 1270 (9th Cir. 2005).

20 Here, Agrio fails to prove that the state court's factual determinations were objectively 21 unreasonable. The state court properly found that some evidence supported the Board's 22 determination that Agrio was unsuitable for parole. (Ex. E.) The Board relied on the facts of the 23 crime in concluding that Agrio continued to be a danger to society if released from prison and 24 that he was both minimizing his role in the crime and failing to take responsibility for his 25 offense. (Ex. B; Ex. C at 12-22, 66-74, 98-100; Ex. E.) Additionally, the Board relied on 26 documents in Agrio's central file and his testimony regarding his commitment offense, social 27 history, relationships with family and friends, parole plans should he be released, his 28 psychological evaluations, and programming while in prison in determining Agrio was not

1 suitable for parole. (Ex. C at 12-97; Ex. E.)

2 Accordingly, the findings of the state court are both supported by the record and a 3 reasonable interpretation of the evidence presented. Agrio fails to prove that the state court's 4 factual determinations were unreasonable. As such, the state court's denial of habeas relief 5 meets the AEDPA standards, and there is no basis for this Court to overturn the decision. The 6 petition for writ of habeas corpus should be denied.

7 E. Agrio Erroneously Argues that He Is Entitled to Parole Based on the 8 Result in In re Shaputis.

9 In addition to challenging the sufficiency of the evidence, Agrio also contends that he is 10 entitled to parole based on In re Shaputis, supra, __ Cal.Rptr.3d __, 2007 WL 2372405. (Petn. at 11 Mem. Points & Authorities, Ground 1.) Agrio's allegation is both without merit and fails to state 12 a federal claim.

13 As an initial matter, Agrio's claim regarding the proper interpretation and application of 14 Shaputis is solely a state law claim, and thus not cognizable in federal habeas corpus. See, e.g., 15 Rose v. Hodges, 423 U.S. 19, 21-22 (1975); Gutierrez v. Griggs, 695 F.2d 1195, 1197-98 (9th 16 Cir. 1983). Moreover, even if Agrio is alleging that the state court erroneously interpreted or 17 applied the applicable legal principles in Shaputis when it denied his petition, a federal court may 18 not challenge a state court's interpretation or application of state law, Middleton v. Cupp, 768
19 F.2d 1083, 1085 (9th Cir. 1985), or grant relief "on the basis of a perceived error of state law."
20 Pulley v. Harris, 465 U.S. 37, 41 (1984). Indeed, because the California Supreme Court recently 21 granted review in Shaputis, it may no longer be properly cited or relied on by any court or party.
22 Cal. Rule of Court, Rule 8.1105, subd. (e), Rule 8.1115, subd. (a). Thus, the petition should be 23 denied as to Agrio's claim challenging the proper application of Shaputis because he fails to 24 demonstrate that the state courts unreasonably denied his petition as to this claim.

25 Alternatively, to the extent Agrio's allegation states a federal claim, it is without merit.
26 An inmate is entitled to a parole release date unless the Board determines that "consideration of 27 the public safety requires a more lengthy period of incarceration for this individual." Pen. Code, 28 § 3041, subds. (a)-(b). In Dannenberg, the California Supreme Court held that "the overriding

1 statutory concern for public safety in the individual case trumps any expectancy the 2 indeterminate life inmate may have in a term of comparative equality with those served by other 3 similar offenders.” Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at p. 1084. As a result, the Court concluded 4 that California’s parole scheme does not require that “the Board determine an individual inmate’s 5 suitability by reference to other offenders of the same class.” Id. at p. 1091. Thus, Agrio is 6 entitled to parole only after the Board has made an individualized determination that he is 7 suitable for release because he no longer poses an unreasonable risk of safety to society. Irons, 8 505 F.3d at 851, n.3 (citing Dannenberg, 34 Cal. 4th at 1078). Moreover, Agrio cannot show 9 that he is entitled to parole based on Shaputis, or that he is entitled to a similar result, because the 10 Board is prohibited from engaging in a comparative review of his commitment offense and 11 similar offenses committed by other inmates. Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at 1098.
12 Accordingly, Agrio cannot meet his burden of demonstrating that the state court unreasonably 13 denied him relief as to this claim.

CONCLUSION

Under AEDPA, the Court may grant a writ of habeas corpus only if it determines that the state court findings denying relief were contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law, or involved an unreasonable interpretation of the facts. Agrio fails to prove that this is the case. First, he received all process due under Greenholtz, the only clearly established federal law specifically addressing the process due at parole consideration hearings. Second, even if the some-evidence standard applies, Agrio cannot show that the state court decision denying him relief was based on either an unreasonable application of this standard under clearly established Supreme Court law or that it was based an unreasonable determination of the facts. For these reasons, Respondent respectfully requests that the petition for writ of habeas corpus be denied.
